May 14, 2008

Charleston County RoadWise will hear comments tonight at a public meeting on proposed plans to improve traffic congestion at a major James Island intersection.

The meeting, which will review proposals to improve turning lanes and signals at the intersection of Folly and Camp roads, is from 7 to 9 p.m. at the James Island Charter High School at 1000 Fort Johnson Road.

The work will be funded by a half-cent sales tax created to pay for transportation projects. Charleston County Council requested a second meeting on the project in response to increased public interest.

Tonight's attendees can comment, ask questions and review the proposals.

RoadWise is the county's management program for road and highway construction, resurfacing, paving and drainage projects that are funded by the half-cent sales tax. Charleston County voters in November 2006 approved issuing bonds to fund county road and transportation projects and imposing the half-cent sales tax to pay off the bonds.
