

Introduction

On November 2, 2004, the Citizens of Charleston County voted to impose a one-half cent sales tax for the next 25 years to help improve transportation infrastructure. As a result of this Transportation Tax, jobs will become available, particularly with construction and construction-related companies. In addition, opportunities will become available for college students seeking to learn about the development of transportation infrastructure, project management, finance, and accounting.

The RoadWise On-the-Job Training and Intern Development Plan has been devised to foster jobs creation, educational opportunities, and continued professional development for the Charleston County workforce, which theoretically will result in additional tax dollars and economic development.
